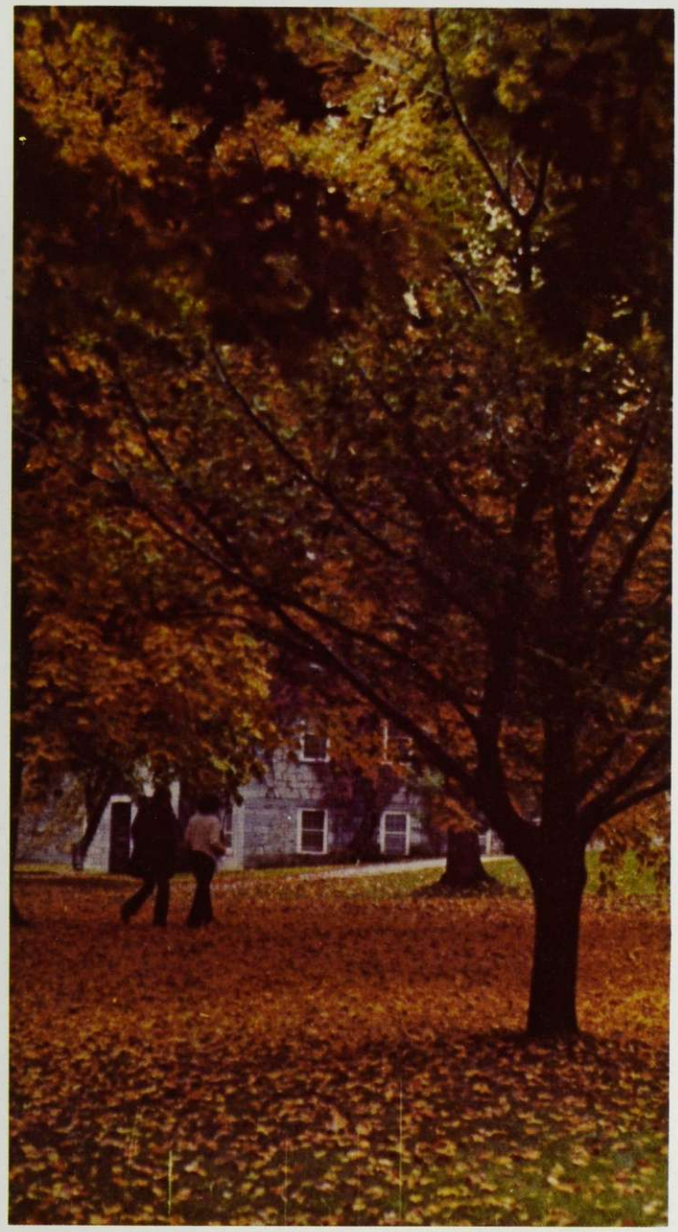
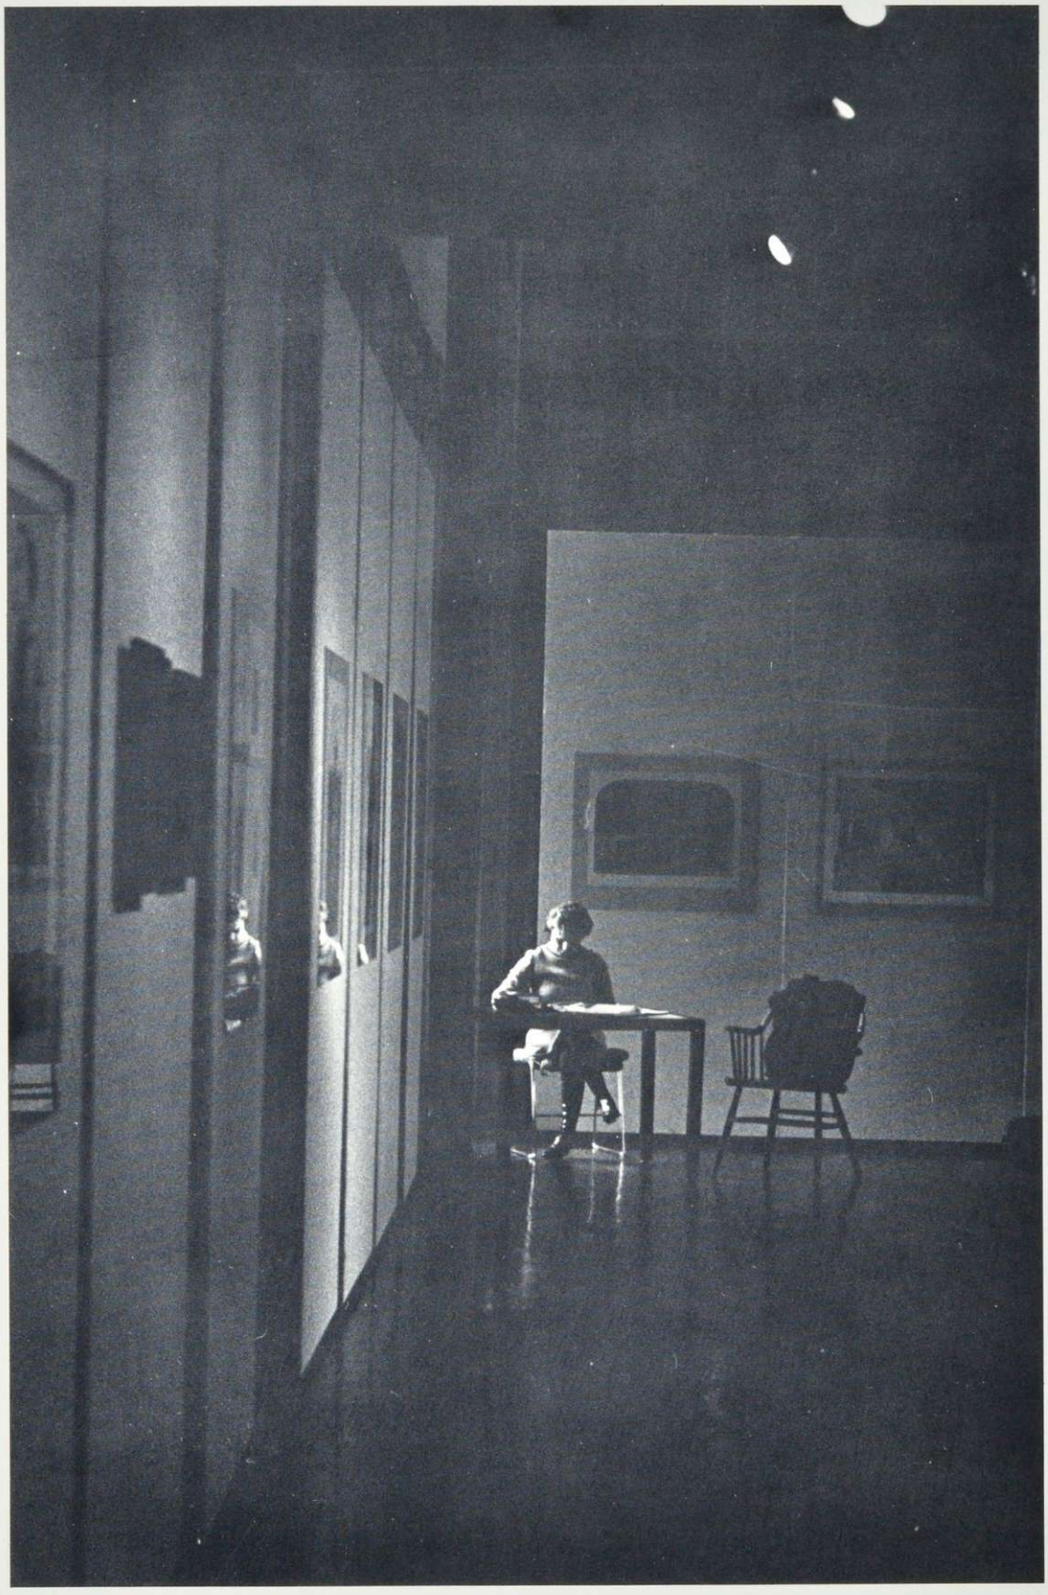
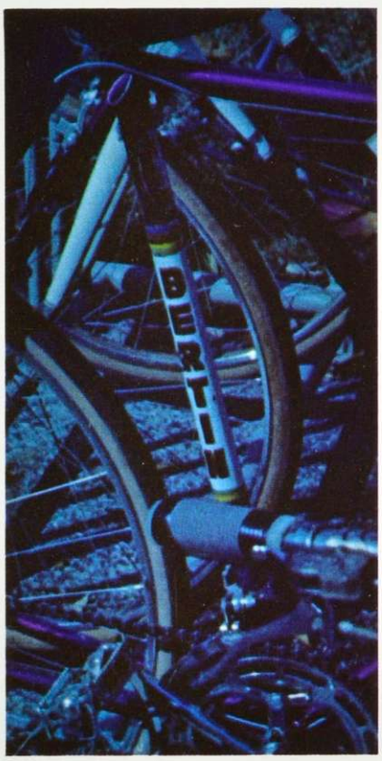
1974 KALEIDOSCOPE

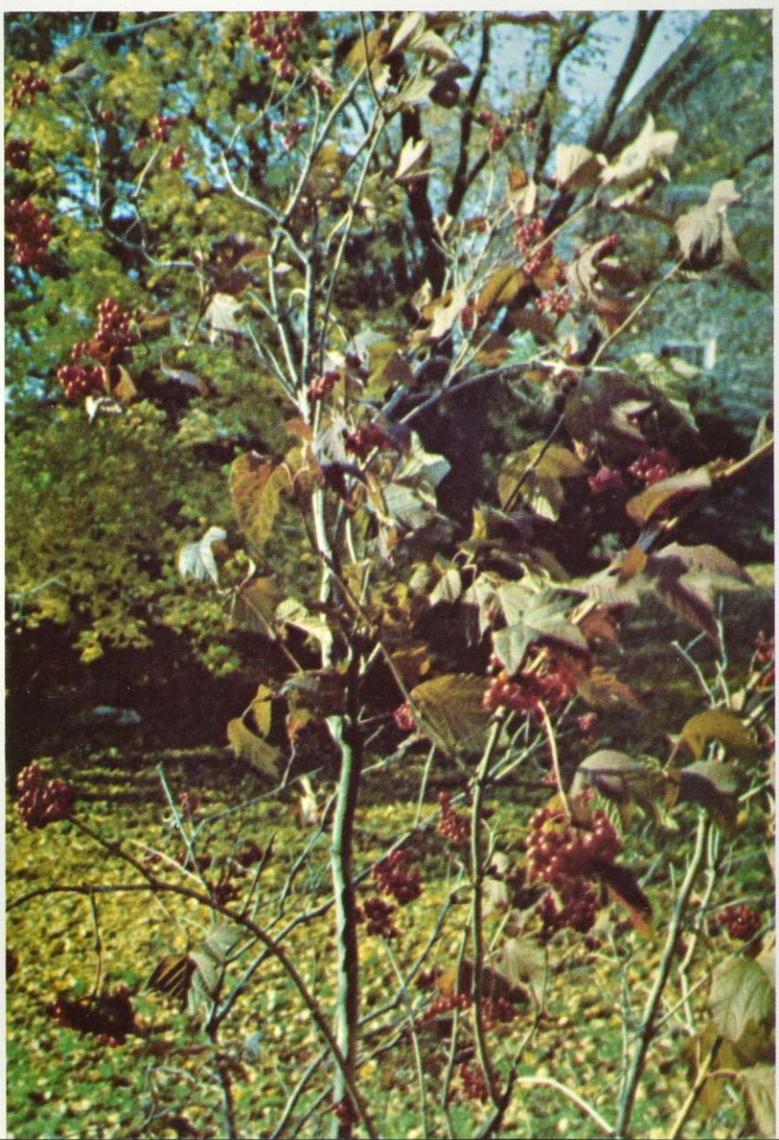
The camera models the past,
shapes the perceptions of the viewer,
through its own image
of a moment stopped in time and space.
10, 12, 15 years from now
the images here will be the same,
but they will be seen differently,
and thus will be different themselves.
Could it be that all of it,
the past and the present,
takes place in minds that change?
That there is in fact a historical consciousness?
That the revolution is coming?
At this point, . . .

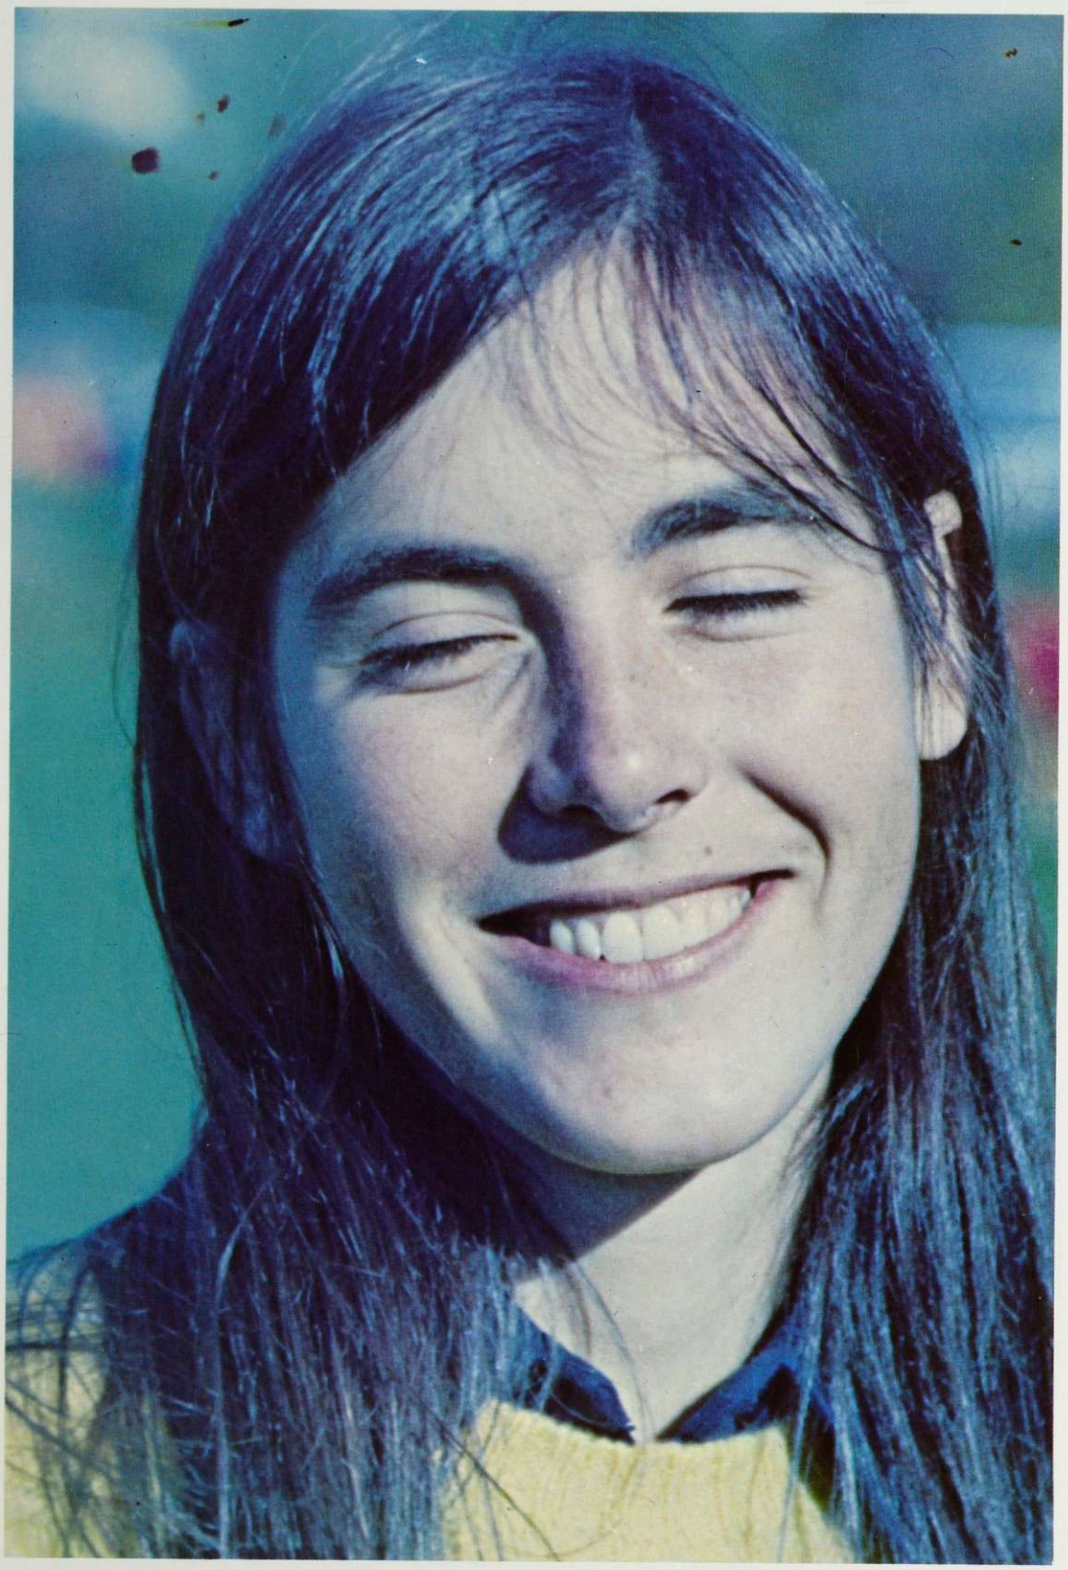
Isn't the sun through the leaves pretty?

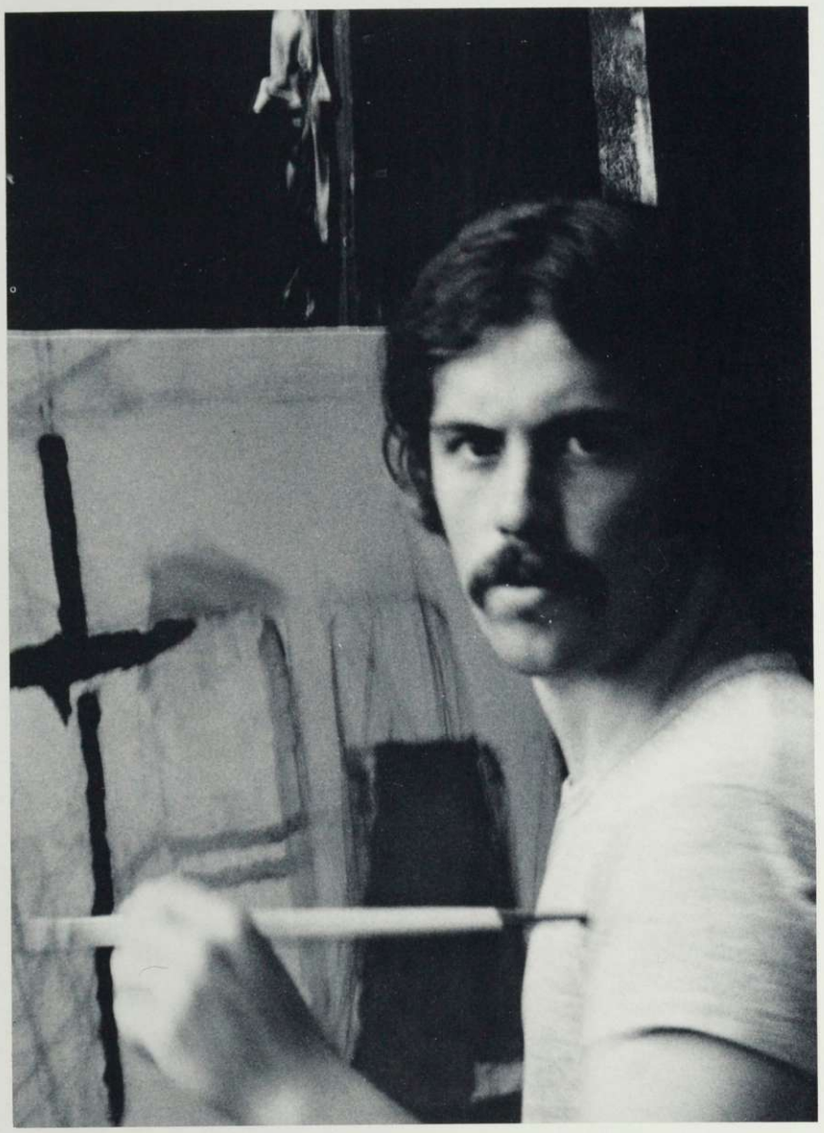




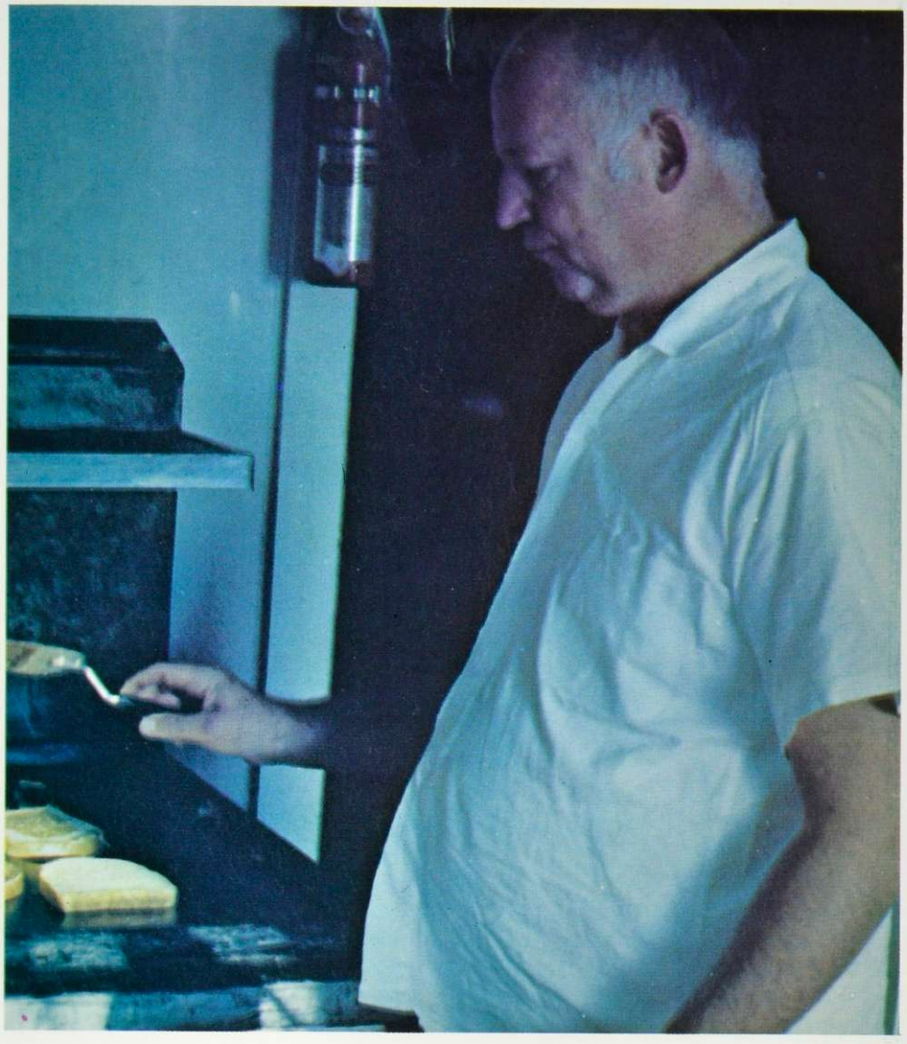


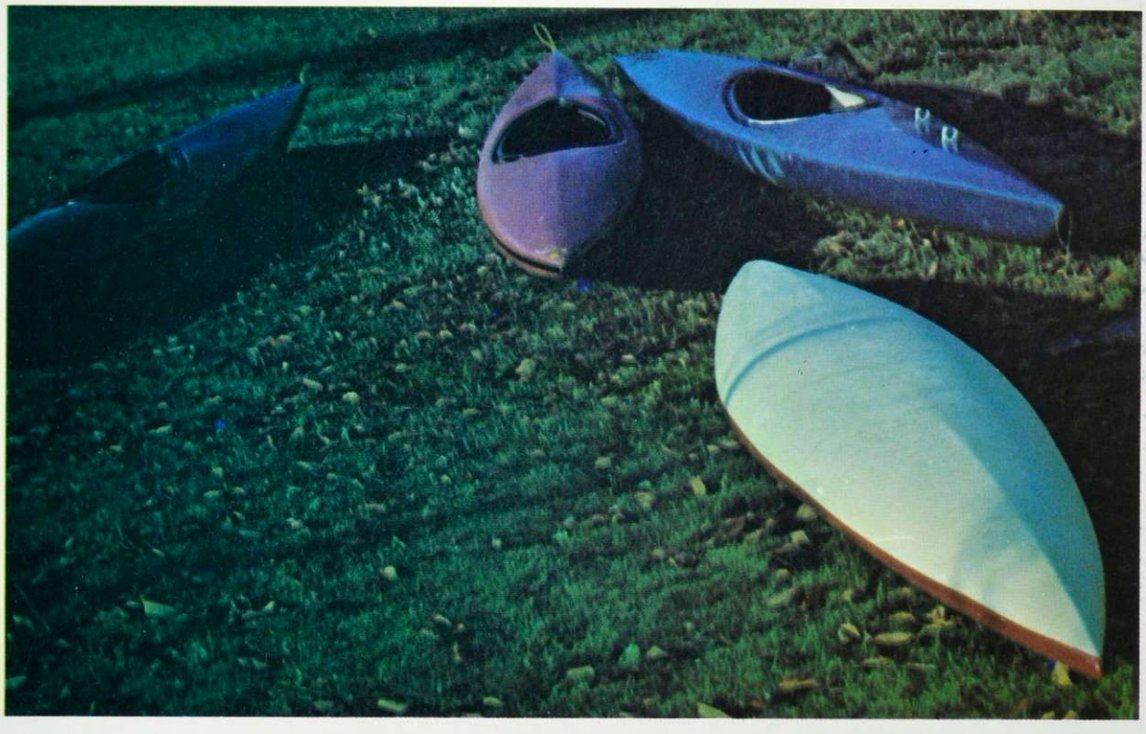




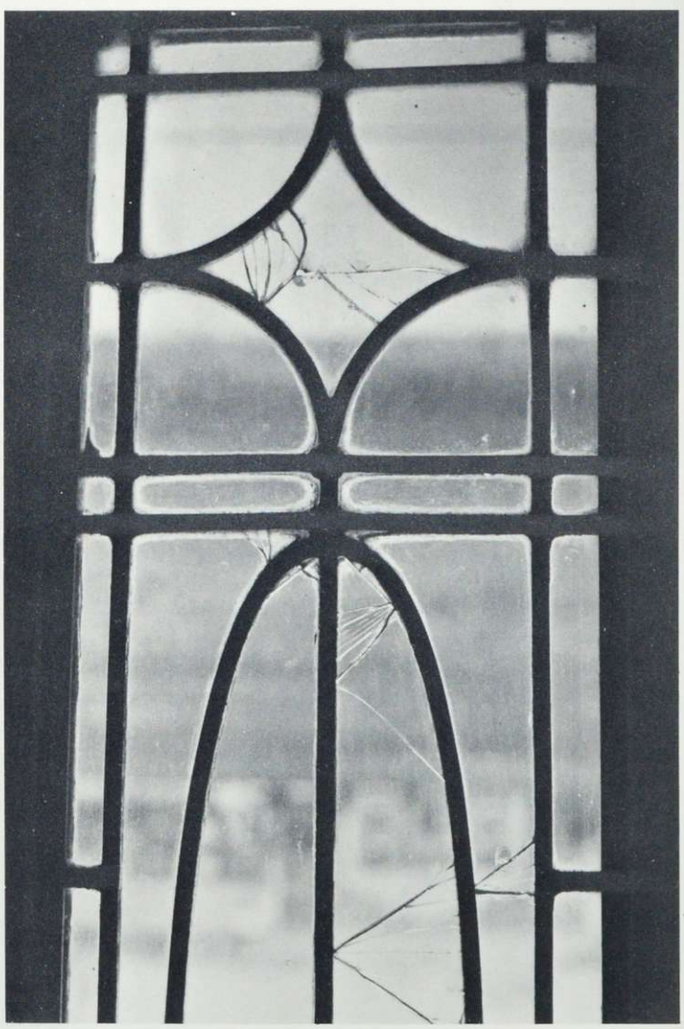


HERE WE ARE
MOM & DAD





CAMERA OBSCURA



The lens of the camera
retains ideas of the past
with a kind of perfect imagination.
Through its exactitude,
it obscures the images
of our own minds
in order that those minds
may see differently
what an object was
at a time that no longer is.
People may become objects
and inanimate things
may take on character.
Imagine that.

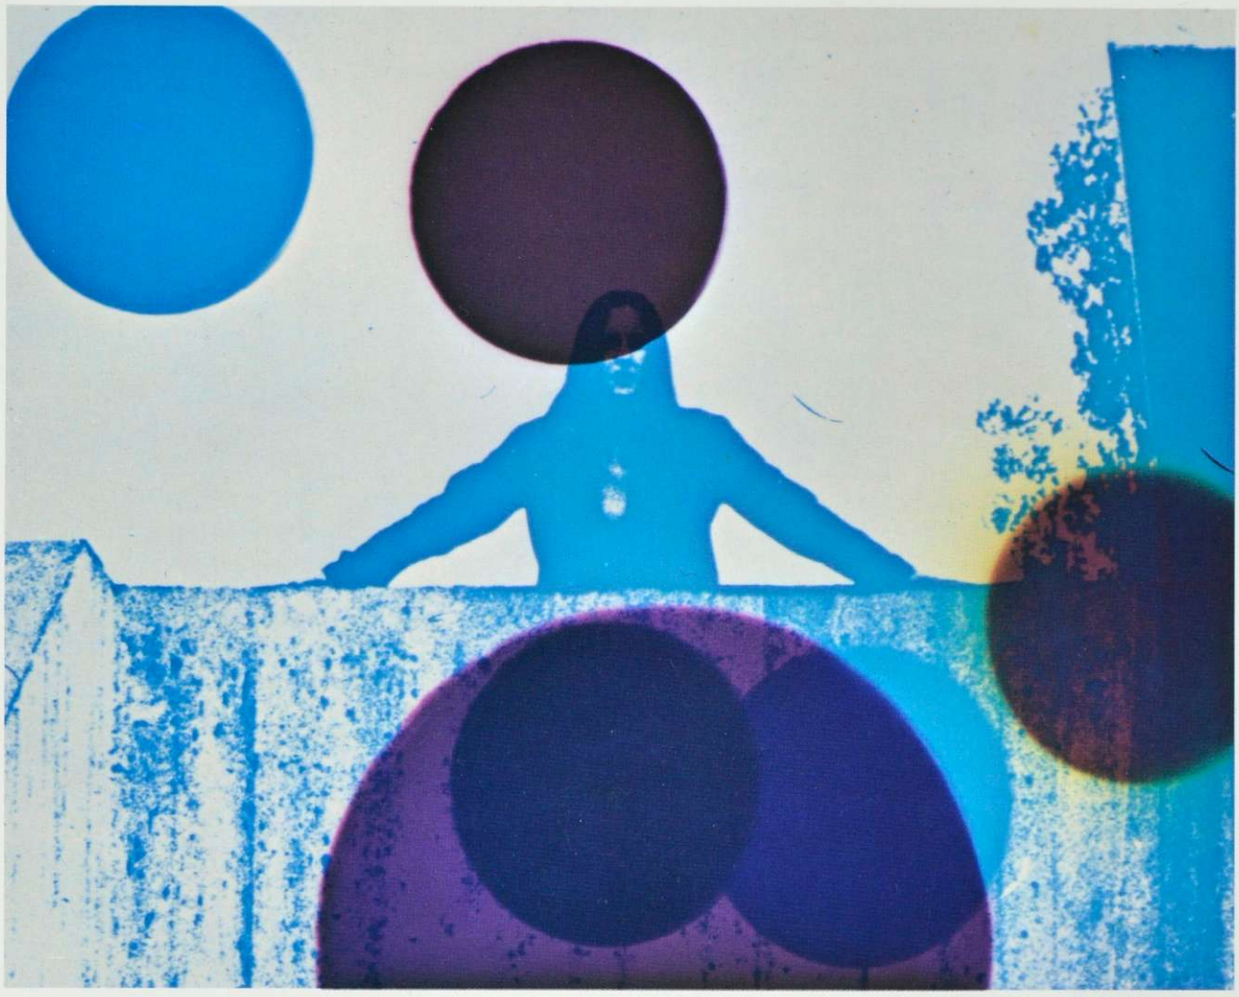
SEE VERMONT



The truth of art
is the correct vision of the obscure
that will become the dominant,
distorting what has gone before.
It embodies both the past and the future
in a present concrete image
that is changed itself
as it becomes a part of the past.
Perhaps Warren G. Harding
may effect our return.

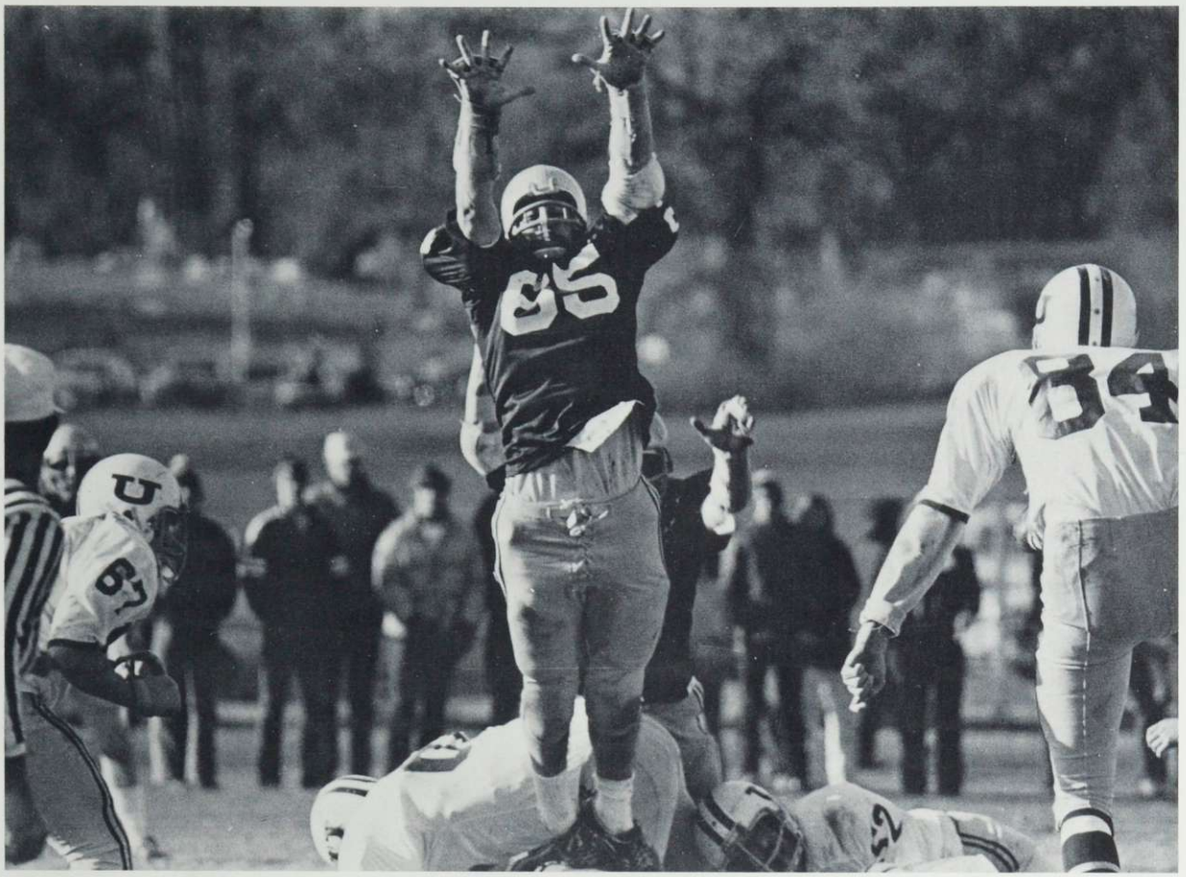
SPORTS

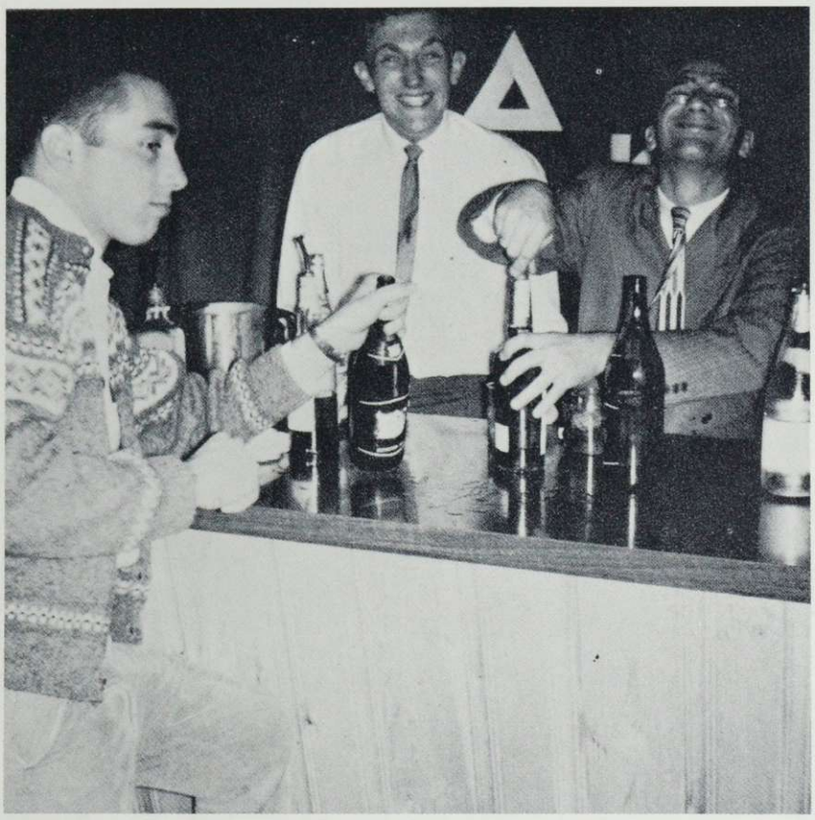
It was a good year, you know.
Soccer, 11-1, unscored upon for nine consecutive games.
Field hockey, undefeated as usual.
Football, 7-1, with only a heartbreaking loss to Norwich.
It was almost unbelievable.
You remember.



1964 KALEIDOSCOPE

The life of a J.C. is essentially schizophrenic. From crisis to crisis her role changes drastically. At one moment she's a mother hen protecting while pushing. The next she's a pillar of wisdom lecturing on the Hegelian Dialectic. But in the final analysis, she's basically a Junior who's only too glad to regress and become a Freshman once more. ("Whee! Grab your water pistols, gang! It's noisy hours!")

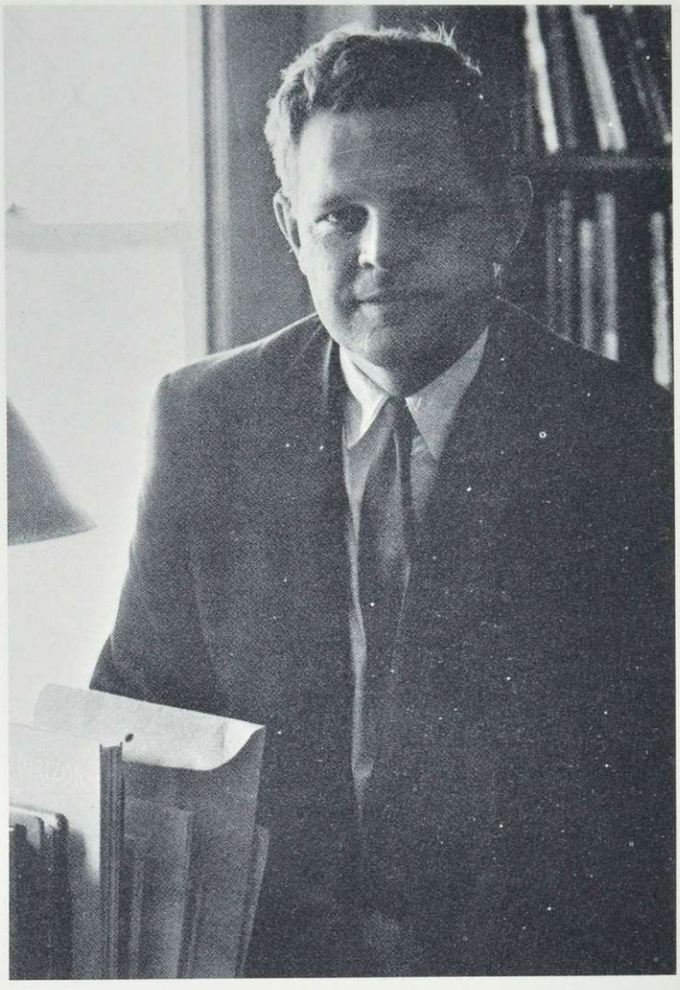
Junior Counselors



Seniors are tense yet confident, always discussing the weighty or the meaningless, gaining an awareness which grows with detachment.

Kaleidoscope Staff

A yearbook is for many things—a retreat into the past, a talisman for the future, an upperclass New Faces, an asset during rush—but most of all, a yearbook must say Middlebury—as we like to think of it, but also as it is. A yearbook is made with pictures—pictures that "say something" because they remind us of a year, or four, which have influenced us and our futures—as does any experience—irrevocably.



These ordinary images have become absurd
with the passage of ten years.
What then are we to make
of the fate of our own present?
Have fun with your once and future pasts.

Most images fade with time,
and lose their perspective,
such that they appear
as if seen through a series
of ninety-nine opened doors.
Or, following the perspicacity of a sage,
we remember because we possess
the vitas mnemonisis.
Such are the vagaries of life.

We are continually leaving
the light at the beginning of the tunnel.
As the camera remembers for you,
remind your dialectic consciousness
that it's not only what you see,
but how you see it.
